Villa has refused absolutely to ally himself with the federals under Maas in fighting the Americans.

Elwood Hamilton, of Frankfort, is a candidate for railroad commissioner to succeed Wm. Klair.

The South American envoys have dropped the rebels out of their plans and will deal only with Huerta.

The Kitty League opens the season to-morrow. The first games here will be Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with Henderson.

Two more wounded boys at Vera Cruz have died and there are now 19 good reasons why Funston should be allowed to go on to Mexico City.

Train robbers on the Illinois Central killed the Pullman porter before they began operations, thus eliminating competition.—Elizabethtown News.

Joseph Caillaux and Ferdinand d'Ailleires, of Paris, fought a bloodless pistol duel Monday. Caillaux should have let his wife do his shooting. She hits.

John R. Silliman, American consul at San Luis Potosi, is held a prisoner and threatened with execution by Gen. Maas, the federal leader who was run out of Vera Cruz.

The mediators have set their first meeting for May 18th, about the time Funston ought to be in Mexico City. Evidently they are making no effort to be im-mediators.

Hiram Duryea, aged 81, a retired millionaire starch manufacturer, was murdered while asleep at his home in the Bayridge section of Brooklyn, by his demented son, Chester Duryea, aged 43.

Richard Olney, of Massachusetts, has declined the $12,000 job tendered him by the President. The other four members of the Reserve board are: Paul M. Warburg, New York; Dr. Adolph Caspar Miller, San Francisco; Harry A. Wheeler, Chicago; W. P. G. Harding, Birmingham, Ala.

The constitutionalists at Tampico have notified Rear Admiral Mayo, commander of the American warships stationed there, that if any of his vessels attempted to enter the Panuco river the oil reserves above the city would be emptied and the oil ignited, which would mean certain destruction to the town.

The three South American envoys who have undertaken by diplomacy to settle Mexico's civil strife, as well as her international difficulties, have announced that the first formal conference with representatives of the "different parties interested in mediation" would be held at Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, May 18.

Gen. Sickles.

Gen. Dan. E. Sickles, who died this week in New York, was a congressman in 1859 and killed Philip Barton Key, U. S. District Attorney, for liberties with his first wife, an Italian woman. She died a few years later. Sickles went into the war and came out a one-legged general, but remained in the regular army until he became Minister to Spain in 1869. At the court of Spain Sickles' vigorous personality made him a dominating figure. At Madrid he contracted his second marriage with the beautiful and distinguished Senorita Creagh. This romance was followed by estrangement which was to last more than a quarter of a century. Returning alone to New York, Gen. Sickles again entered politics. He served as Sheriff of New York, and at sixty-seven he was re-elected to Congress. Gen. Sickles' life drew to a close with frequent romantic situations. He faced bankruptcy proceedings in his last years, though he had early in life received a large share of his father's $3,000,000 estate, but his estranged wife and son came to his aid on several occasions.

CARRANZA OBSTINATE

Mediation Outlook Grows Less Popular or Hopeful.

TWO MORE SOLDIERS DEAD.

The Wounded Are To Be Brought Back to New York And Boston.

The disposition of Gen. Carranza to eliminate himself from the mediation proceedings, if it should include a discussion of Mexico's internal problems, has not met with the favor of administration officials, but they do not think this decision is final.

It is virtually certain that the withdrawal of American forces from Vera Cruz now will not be ordered until some definite settlement of the whole Mexican problem is in sight.

The death of two of the American wounded at Vera Cruz, bringing the mortality list up to nineteen, the announcement that the President and Secretaries Garrison and Daniels would go to Brooklyn to attend memorial services for the seventeen dead being brought back on the Montana, and the order to the hospital ship Solace to bring its wounded back to New York and Boston so that the sick may be in a cooler climate, were the chief announcements from the navy department yesterday. The war department continued plans for possible emergencies, while the state department was active in caring for refugee Americans who are leaving Mexico by the hundreds.

There were also 5,123 widows of soldiers in that way receiving pensions from the government. President Wilson has selected Richard Olney, former Secretary of State in the Cleveland administration, to be Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Paul Warburg, of New York, to be a member of the board. Mr. Olney was offered the Ambassadorship to Great Britain by President Wilson early last year, but expressed an unwillingness to leave the country on account of his business interests. TO LIFE AND LOVE

Modern Prodigal Turned From Folly to Wisdom Almost at the Last Moment.

By GEORGE GRANTHAM BAIN.

The fiery lights of the little voitures twinkled up and down the Champs Elysees. Now and then the chug-chug of an automobile consumed the distance from the Place de la Concorde to the Rond Point in a minute and disappeared as rapidly toward the Place de l'Etoile.

Henderson kicked the gravel impatiently with his heel. His last ten centimes had been spent for the rent of the iron chair on which he sat. He had been wondering if the ticket of the old woman who rented it to him entitled him to occupy it all night—or if he would be turned out at midnight.

He had just committed the egregious folly of eating an elaborate meal—a very dainty meal, crowned with great, tender, delicious strawberries buried in a silver bowl full of whipped cream, set on a block of crystal clear ice.

He was simply whimsical, and it amused him to have a jest—perhaps last jest—with fate. So when he had faced that evening the alternative of pawning something from his depleted wardrobe or going without a meal, he had arrayed himself in evening dress and taken his last daylight garment to the Mont de Piété.

On a handsome winter overcoat and a London-made silk-lined suit, scarcely worn, he had raised enough money for his final fling at fortune.

"Nice night, isn't it," said Cazenove as he sat down on the adjoining chair.

"Quite nice," said Henderson with an affection of interest. "What you doing out here, Cazenove?"

"Taking the air like yourself," said Cazenove, as he tended his cigar case. "Healthful open-air life, this in Paris. The riot of night life on Broadway isn't much like this busy subdued existence, is it? I was there last week."

Henderson's heart came up in his throat. This link seemed to bring him closer and closer to the old life—the life in God's country, as every expatriated American calls it, if only under his breath.

"Didn't you know I'd been away," said Henderson, trying to control his voice that threatened to break for a moment.

"Just ran over for three days," said Cazenove. "Had to see my partner. See your governor for a minute. He's looking well."

"I guess he's all right," said Henderson. He could not say much more, since he hadn't heard from his father in more than three months.

They sat watching the procession of carriages for several minutes silently. Then Cazenove said: "I think I'll be going on. Dine with us tomorrow?"

"Thanks," said Henderson. "It mean, thank you, no. I can't. I've an engagement."

"Can't you break it? Is it in town?"

"Yes—that is, Cazenove, old man!"

"Well, Henderson?"

"I think I've come to the jumping-off place, Cazenove."

"So I thought when I saw you sitting here."

Cazenove smiled and sat down again, balancing his cane on one finger to distract his eyes. Henderson gave him a quick look.

"I didn't know I looked so seedy as that," he said.

Ordinarily he would never have thought to seek sympathy from Cazenove. Cazenove was such a confounded cynic in everyday life. But his manner was not unsympathetic nor was it indifferent.

"I cut myself off from the governor three months ago," said Henderson. "It wasn't all my fault. He was just as stubborn as I was."

Cazenove smiled a little; but he didn't answer.

"Did he—" Henderson hesitated a moment. "Did he tell you about the girl?"

"No," said Cazenove.

"I suppose the governor was right," Henderson went on lamely, "but I couldn't see it that way, and he was—he was so positive. The fact is, Cazenove, I wanted to marry Josephine Dedham—we were engaged—and he said I must put it off for two years and get into some work—He didn't think it was fair to Josephine, because I'd told her we'd be married right away, and so—"

"And so you broke with Josephine?"

"Was I wrong?"

There was an irritating cynicism in Cazenove's expression when he answered, but Henderson didn't see it.

"It's a question," he said, "whether it was more wrong to tell Josephine she must wait two years or that she must wait forever. You chose the second alternative."

"Oh, she doesn't care," said Henderson gloomily. "I've never had a word from her since I left New York."

"You've written regularly, of course," said Cazenove in his even voice.

"I wrote her once," he said, "and told her the governor was going to disinherit me and that we couldn't marry. She didn't reply."

"Well, my boy, what could a self-respecting girl say if a man wrote to her that?"

"Did I write that?"

" Didn't you?"

There was another pause.

"I think I did," said Henderson, "though I don't see how you could know. You don't mean that she thought I accused her of—"

Cazenove waited a few minutes. Then he said softly, "What else could it mean?"

Henderson stood up and struck the gravel with his cane. An alert cabman drew up at the curb and held up his hand.

"Come up to my house tonight," said Cazenove with his hand on Henderson's arm. "I've a spare bed."

He half pushed him into the seat of the little voiture.

Henderson presently broke the silence that lay between them.

"I've been stubborn—and I'm wrong, Cazenove. I knew it down somewhere in my heart when the governor was speaking to me. But I wouldn't acknowledge it even to myself. I'd go to him this minute if I could and tell him so?"

The voiture had stopped before a big white building, one floor of which was lighted brilliantly.

"You know I saw your governor when I was in New York," Cazenove said. "Would you like to hear what he said to me? He said, 'Tell Jack if he wants to come home at any time that we'll need him badly. Give him all the money he needs. And perhaps I wasn't as considerate as I might have been.'"

Henderson did not answer, but he turned his head away.

"Come along," said Cazenove. Henderson followed his host up two flights of steps. As they reached the landing Mrs. Cazenove threw open the door.

"I thought you were never coming," she said, "and the chafing dish has been waiting an hour."

She held out a welcoming hand to Henderson. But as he entered the brightly lighted room another figure half in the shadow stood hesitating.

"Josephine," he cried—and held out his arms.

It was fifteen minutes later when Mrs. Cazenove's voice from the other room summoned them with a cheery "Supper's ready."

They came in arm in arm, smiling through half-dried tears. There was something of Cazenove's dry smile on his wife's lips as she said: "Did I forget to tell you that Josephine was one of my chums at college, Mr. Henderson? Wasn't it stupid of me?"

"I'm afraid I've delayed your supper," said Henderson.

"Not very much," said Mrs. Cazenove quizzically. "Let me see. How many hours ago was it Henry, when we were driving up the Champs Elysees and you saw Mr. Henderson sitting under the trees?"

"Just long enough to make me very hungry," said Cazenove.

It was two o'clock when Cazenove put out the lights and candle in hand, escorted Henderson to his room. As he put down the candle, Henderson grasped his hand and pressed it hard.

"I was an ass, Cazenove," he said.

"So I understood," said Cazenove with a smile.—Boston Globe.

Old Coins Found.

While plowing in a field on the farm of Joseph Scott in the Scottsburg vicinity of Caldwell county, Nelson Darnell, aged about twenty-four years, unearthed nearly $200 in silver coins, besides some foreign coins of varying denominations. The money consisted of a number of pieces ranging in denomination from a dime to a dollar, but consisted mostly of half dollars. The dates on the coins ranged from 1796 to 1830. It is said that several of the coins have a premium value, and that one of them, a 50 cent piece, is worth $50. An interesting feature of the case is that about ten years ago another man, plowing in the same field, unearthed about $400 in silver coins.

"Bert" Wing.

Bert Wing, who has voluntarily returned to the penitentiary, is the youngest son of the late S. M. Wing, of Owensboro. In the early eighties he killed in St. Louis, Joe Glenn, formerly a clerk in the store of the late A. J. Mitchell, of Owensboro, in a drunken row over Miriam Eaves, the beautiful Greenville girl with whom Bert became infatuated when they were both little more than children. For this he was convicted and sentenced to the Missouri penitentiary for ten years. After four or five years he was pardoned and returned immediately to Kentucky, again seeking Miriam Eaves, who had been induced to reform and enter a convent in Michigan.

On a visit to her old home at Greenville, he found her and induced her to marry him one mid-night, and they left for Louisville. They resumed their dissipation and one night, in a Green street brothel, in a fit of jealous rage, he shot her to death.

He escaped to New Orleans, was captured, returned to Louisville and arraigned for trial. There were no extenuating circumstances, and there was, not the slightest doubt that he would be condemned to die on the gallows, the method of execution then prevailing. But before the case reached the jury Judge Eaves, the venerable father of Wing's victim, arose in the court room and asked that the proceedings be ended and that Wing be given a sentence of life imprisonment instead of death. He said it was the earnest wish of himself and all his family that no more life be taken as the result of the wretched destiny of his daughter and the man she married.

The old man's plea prevailed—and Wing was sent to the penitentiary for life. He escaped January 6, 1908. At Cincinnati he surrendered to the police and admitted his identity and crime. He had been going under the name of John Thornton.

Died 52 Years Ago.

County Clerk Harris has received from G. A. Long, Larned, Kans., a request for information about a soldier named Thos. H. Long, who died in Hopkinsville Dec. 16, 1862. He does not say whether he was a Union or Confederate soldier.

BACK TO THE OLD DAYS

THOSE men who lived in Hopkinsville during the years 1894 to 1902 will remember the great sales of under-priced clothing this store gave to its customers. They were years of overstocked manufacturers and timid givers of credit. It was then that our Mr. Anderson by his gift of shrewd buying combined with our great outlet for large quantities of clothing, distributed through our many stores, placed his name before the manufacturers as few men in America have ever done. In those days clothing manufacturers all over the country, when in trouble, turned to us as the ones most likely to have the ready cash to take their surplus stock. Last week, two clothing manufacturers in New York, burdened with a heavy load of surplus clothing and needing ready cash, advised Mr. Anderson they were ready to convert their stock into money at a tremendous loss. At least one of them had had experiences with Mr. Anderson in former years, and remembered that no quantity could be too large but the price had to be very small. When Mr. Anderson got to New York he wrote us thus: "I am sending you a lot of men's and young men's suits, the most remarkable values I have seen for twenty years; you may think I am sending you too many, but when you see the suits, you will know you will sell them quickly. This is a most fortunate strike. In that one lot is the finest clothing made in America--the other, the best medium priced line I know, hence you will be able to please every user of good clothing at a price less than the cost to make. Signed

J. H. ANDERSON.

The clothing is here and the most we need to say about it is: That you will recognize in it Mr. Anderson's matchless judgment for values and his rare good taste for selecting pretty patterns, and back of every suit is our own guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. In addition to above we have added hundreds of boys' and men's suits to the list to make the sale appeal to everyone. Below find them properly listed and price named.

The Wild Onion Pest.

(Uniontown Telegram.)

Wild onions or garlic is causing the farming elements of this section and county more or less uneasiness of late. It is of a wonderful quick growth and spreads rapidly and is of no value whatever and in every way a decided nuisance. It is root, kill or destroy it in anyway. Over in Posey county, Indiana, whole fields and farms are covered with the obnoxious growth, and the progressive agriculturist had an expert botanist from the state University to come to Mt. Vernon and make an exhibit of a preparation that is said to be the only sure cure and preventive. A general test of its value to do away with the stuff was made Tuesday of this week on some of the land affected. The results obtained were gratifying and pleasing.

NOTICE

News From a Neighboring State.

Editor of the Kentuckian:

Knowing something of the enterprising spirits of your readers and their love of progress, I venture to report a few of the many happenings in your neighboring State of Illinois which indicate that the signs of the times are hopeful.

Illinois is a great State. Great in its geographical boundaries, great in material resources, great in population, and great in forces that make for prosperity and righteousness.

During 1913 some notable history was made. The most noteworthy perhaps was the act of the legislature in giving the woman the right to vote. And be it known that our Democratic Governor, the Hon. Edward F. Dunne, signed the bill that made it a law.

The first election after the act became a law was in November last. At that time 28 towns voted on the question of saloons, and twenty-two of them voted dry, and one was a tie.

Here in Pinckneyville, a county seat town of some three thousand inhabitants, we voted out ten saloons. Twice before we had voted on the same proposition and gone down in defeat. But this time, thanks to the mothers, wives and sweethearts, we "put 'em out." And sir, the temperance sentiment is so strong that we are having law enforcement. Business was not depressed but stimulated. Merchants testify that men who could not pay their store accounts before are now paying up old accounts and keeping up the new ones. There is a general revival of interest in church work. The general attendance has increased in all the churches to a noticeable degree.

On April 7th of the present year another election was held and two hundred towns voted dry, including many of the large cities, thus putting eleven hundred saloons out of commission and adding twenty-one dry counties to the list.

Commission form of government is being adopted by many towns up this way. Our people voted it in just last week. One argument that seemed to appeal to our citizens was the fact that out of more than three hundred cities and towns throughout the country that have adopted Commission form of Government not one of them has gone back to the old plan.

And now for the great Southern Baptist Convention in Nashville, Tenn., in May. The southern half of Illinois co-operates with Southern Baptists in doing Home and Foreign Mission work. This writer will attend as a delegate from the Nine Mile Association. We hope to stop by and visit with home folks and friends in Hopkinsville while on the trip.

J. A. McCORD.

To The Public.

I take this method of expressing my sincere thanks to the Citizens of Hopkinsville, for the loyal support given me in my recent race for School Trustee.

My success I attribute not to any influence or popularity of my own, but to the time honored principle of rotation in office, yet I can but be grateful for this expression of confidence.

May I bespeak the co-operation of all the people in my humble efforts to serve them, trusting and hoping that by applying the same efforts to this new undertaking that I have to my business, then I may, if possible approximate the faithful and very efficient work of my esteemed predecessor.

Respectfully, your obedient servant of the people.

HOW TO DO IT.

High-Priced Cuts, He Asserts, Are Not Necessarily the Best—More Nutritious in Many of the Cheaper Grades—About Cheaps.

In the Woman's Home Companion a retail butcher writes an article entitled "Reducing the Meat Bill," in which he shows how people who buy the high-priced cuts don't get the best meat. He says that some of the cheapest meats are the best. He takes his weekly meat bill of $4.62 and shows item by item, how that bill can be reduced to $3.21, just by using cheaper cuts, which he says are better cuts. After dealing with the various kinds of steaks—in which, by the way, he tells about the steak that the butcher eat himself—he goes on as follows about roasts and chops:

"A roast of beef costing $1 or $1.50
at the present time is not much; a hungry and healthy family will probably finish it in one meal. You can still enjoy good roast beef, and surely for less money, only buy the right cut.
From past observation, the writer has found that nine out of ten customers
ask for the first cut of the rib roast.
Of course, they are the most expensive cuts. The fifth, sixth and shoulder ribs are hardly in demand, and the butcher has a hard job selling them.
These end ribs or shoulder ribs of roast beef are not only considerably cheaper to buy, but are richer in nourishment and food value. When buying one of the three or four ribs of beef, say, for instance, weighing five pounds,
you will find that you hardly have sufficient meat left after it is carefully trimmed and the bone taken out. The difference in price between the first cut on the rib and the last two cuts is at least six cents a pound, and when you ask for a shoulder rib roast ask the butcher to insert a piece of suet in the center of the roast, or, if he has time, to lard it with thin pieces of fat.
Another good piece of meat for roast beef is the top sirloin, which is not so cheap, but it is recommended because it has no waste.

"The next important item on the meat bill is chops—either lamb, pork or veal chops. Lamb chops, however, are the kind mostly demanded; and, of course, the demand is for loin and rib chops, the most expensive. There is the same solution as with steaks—buy shoulder chops; they cost less and are sweeter. This same principle applied again to pork chops. The shoulder chops are very sweet and tender, and the butcher will sell them for less, but very few people know about them."

Work Basket.
This stand may be made of three bamboo canes or three broomsticks.
These should be 30 inches long. Fasten them firmly in the center with wide.
Fasten a shallow basket with wire near the end of the canes. It will be more secure if holes are bored in the canes to pass the wire through.
White enamel the whole. If a cover is desired for the basket, sew a strip of pretty cretonne or China silk to the inside of the basket and run a drawing of narrow ribbon or cord on top. Use bows of ribbon to cover wire where the canes cross and where basket is attached to stand. Ribbon used should match cretonne or silk that is used for basket trimming.

Prune or French Plum Mold.
Soak three-quarters of an ounce of gelatin in half a pint of cold water.
Stone one pound of French plums, put them in a stewpan with one-quarter pound of castor sugar, three-quarters of a pint of water, and a strip of lemon peel. Stew till tender, remove the lemon peel, add the gelatin, stir till dissolved, add a wineglassful of wine, port or claret, and pour into a mold with a hole in the center. When set turn it out and fill the center of the mold with half a pint of whipped cream.

Southern Tea Cake.

Beat together four eggs and two cups of sugar, then add one cup of butter, one even teaspoon of soda and a teaspoon of vanilla. Add four cups of flour or as much as it needed.
Place on molding board, roll thin and cut with biscuit cutter. Sprinkle sugar on top of the cakes, cinnamon also if you care for it, just before putting in the oven.

To Remove Spots From Carpets.
To remove grease spots from carpets the following is excellent: Lay a piece of blotting paper over the spot and set a flatiron on top of the paper, just hot enough not to scorch. Change the paper as often as it becomes soaked.

To Remove Finger Prints From Piano.
To remove finger marks on a highly polished piano, wipe with a cloth wet in pure cold water. It does not injure in the slightest if wiped dry, and restores the new look at once.

Keeping Flatirons Smooth.
Flatirons can be kept clean and smooth by rubbing them first with a piece of wax tied in a cloth and afterward rubbing them on a paper or cloth strewn with coarse salt.

Restoring Gilt Frames.
When gilt picture frames become discolored rub them with a sponge dipped in turpentine. This is very satisfactory as it restores the bright look.

TO BEGIN THE MEAL

DAINTY APPETIZER IS ALWAYS
IN ORDER.

Almost Any Number of Delicate, Tempting Titbits Are at Command of Housewife—Should

Be More Morsel.

A good many of us think that unless we can keep a butler an hors d'oeuvre regularly served is out of the question. To be sure, we serve oysters on the half shell and clams and grapefruit. But we seldom venture beyond these things, unless we entertain formally.

The middle-class French housewife understands the true value and economy of an hors d'oeuvre. Poor French housewife! How often she is used to illustrate the housewife's virtues!
She must tire of her popularity.
But the fact remains that she does make use of the hors d'oeuvre in the proper fashion.

What she understands is this: That a dainty titbit to begin the meal puts the diners in a pleasant frame of mind.
It whets their appetites and at the same time soothes them and puts them in a mood to enjoy, and, moreover,
to assimilate the dishes that follow.

The hors d'oeuvre need not be expensive. Caviar is not essential to any one's happiness. But it must be delicate, tempting.

A skinned and boned sardine, laid neatly on a narrow strip of thin, hot buttered toast and garnished with a sprig of crisp parsley is an easily prepared and inexpensive titbit. A few chilled, red radishes, with a thin, round sandwich of white bread and butter, makes a good luncheon appetizer.
A little fish paste, which is sold in tubes, spread on a toasted wafer, is another appetizing morsel.

These suggestions show that the planning of an appetizer need not be very troublesome. If radishes are in market, if they look unusually good, make use of them. If they aren't in market, go to the supply closet and get down a can of sardines.

The hors d'oeuvre, be it remembered, is only a morsel to tempt the appetite—a soothing taste to put us in a mood for soup and the other good things to come. In this guise it is a valuable addition to our hurried American meals.

It is never more than a morsel, a tickler to the palate, a sample. It is never a substantial dish that in any way appeases the fury of the appetite in making it too substantial, some cooks err.

It should always be no more than a tantalizing taste.

Bread Without Kneading.

Here is the recipe for cooking four loaves of bread without kneading: To quart and a half of lukewarm water and two quarts of flour add two eakers of yeast and three, tablespoonfuls of sugar. Stir in a pinch of salt, and then add two more quarts of sifted flour.

Stir the dough until stiff and shape into loaves with the tips of the fingers. Handle the dough as little as possible, for this lessens the danger of concentrating the raw starch in the center. The loaves should stand until about half raised, and then should be baked in the usual way.

MEN IN MIND IN HOPKINSVILLE

People of Prominence In The Pearl City of The Penny-royal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 5.

Pioneer Poultryman Who Sells His Eggs At Twelve Dollars a Dozen.

Time was when the poultry business was looked upon as a sideline for the women folks. That time has long since past. When chickens sell for prices ranging from $10 to $1,000 a piece and eggs bring from $1 to $5 each, poultry breeding becomes a full-size man's job.

The first man in Hopkinsville to look ahead in poultry was Eld. T. D. Moore, known all over the United States. He was born at Earlington, Ky., Jan. 27, 1854, and was brought up for the Christian ministry and ordained in 1875 at Bethlehem church in Hopkins county. He began preaching at Bordley, Ky., remaining there for seven years. From 1883 to 1887 he was in charge of a church at Horse Cave, Ky., in the latter year coming to Todd county and locating at Trenton. After three years there, he came to Hopkinsville in 1891 and began work as an evangelist of the Christian church and for 21 years held meetings all over Western Kentucky and occasionally in other states. His regular field embraced 33 counties, but from time to time he visited churches in Tennessee, Alabama, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, in his ministry covering a period of 38 years.

In 1892, in order to teach his young sons business habits, he decided to go into the breeding of poultry for profit. After a careful study of breeds, he selected the Cornish Indians, mainly because they were radically different and distinctive in the fowl kingdom. Selecting his breeder, a leading importer, he paid $10 for 13 eggs, and hatched 8 chicks, raising 3 cockerels and 5 pullets. He sold one cockerel for $15 and another for $10, coming out of his investment with a fine pen of five birds and $15 ahead in money. This was the foundation of his flock. The next year he paid $65 for five imported fowls and turned the business over to his oldest son, Carl C. Moore, then a mere boy. Carl ran it for 10 years and was succeeded by Ward, the second son, who in turn gave way to T. D. Jr. Carl is now a prosperous real estate dealer of Memphis, Ward is cashier in a bank at Hopewell, Miss., and T. D. Jr., is taking a medical course in Vanderbilt University.

For the last year or two Mr. Moore has had to give his own attention to the rapidly growing business and as his health has not been good he gave up preaching the first of the present year and is now giving all his time to his poultry business, which is flourishing as never before. It brings him in a steady and ample income and this year is the best year he has ever had. Last year he raised 450 fowls and this year will raise 400 with good luck. He has six breeding pens and from two of them has sold all of the eggs on orders booked in advance at $1 per egg. None of his eggs were sold for less than $5 a sitting during the early months, but all are now being sold at half price since May 1.

During the last 22 years, "Moore's Cornish Indians" have been shipped all over the United States and have won in some of the greatest shows. Fowls have been sent to Honolulu, Mexico and Cuba and eggs are sent every year all over the country. "Moore's Indians" are a distinct strain recognized as the very cream of perfection in this breed. Mr. Moore never markets culls at any price and no eggs are sold that are not full size, well-shaped, and suitable for hatching purposes. Nothing goes out without the reputation of an honest dealer behind it. His yards have been visited by many of the leading poultrymen from Ohio, Iowa, Indiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri and Tennessee, who come to inspect his stock and study his methods. His yards are located on South Virginia street.

RESOLUTIONS

Of Respect of The Church Hill Grange on the Death of Mrs. Ann Bacon Clardy.

On Monday afternoon, April 12th, 1914, our sister passed away at her home near Newstead, Ky. In her death our Grange loses one of its charter members.

Whereas, Our Father, who makes no mistakes, has called her from suffering to rest,

Be it Resolved, therefore, First, That we seek to bow submissively to his Divine Will; Second, That we hereby express our appreciation of her loyalty to our Grange as long as health and surroundings would permit; Third, That we extend to the devoted husband and stricken family in their bereavement our deepest sympathy and lovingly commend them to the grace of our covenant-keeping God.

To the aged companion, we would say:

"Thou, who o'er thy wife's lone bier Sheddest the bitter drops like rain, Hope that a brighter, happier sphere Will give her to thy arms again.

For God has marked each sorrowing day,

And numbered every secret tear, And Heaven's long age of bliss shall pay

For all his children suffer here."

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, copies sent to the county papers and a copy to the family.

A Carnegie Hero.

Sanford R. Parker, the young man awarded a Carnegie medal is a son of Mr. S. R. Parker, proprietor of the Willard Hotel, of this city. The medal is awarded the young man for his heroic work in saving several children from drowning on a pond several winters ago, near Carthage, Ill. Young Parker, who is only about 15 years of age now, together with his sister, were skating. They were preparing to leave when the ice cracked and a number of the young skaters fell through, two or three drowning. The boy and his sister rescued several who had gone through the ice, the deed attracting the attention of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, resulting in the award mentioned above.—Madisonville Hustler.
